Beverage Container Recycling

In one year, more than 17.5 billion carbonated and non-carbonated drinks in aluminum, glass, plastic and bimetal containers are bought in California. The California Redemption Value (CRV) program is the state's way of helping make sure beverage containers are recycled instead of thrown in the trash or left behind as litter.

When you purchase a beverage in a glass, plastic, or aluminum container, you pay a CRV on each container and are entitled to receive this money back. Recycling these beverage containers is important in order to save natural resources, conserve energy, and extend the life of our landfills. The current CRV rates are as follows:

- CRV is $.05 for each container of less than 24 ounces and;
- CRV is $.10 for each container of 24 ounces or greater capacity.
